

Synchronoss to Discuss Mobile Connectivity and Cloud Computing At CTIA Wireless 2011

March 14, 2011

BRIDGEWATER, N.J., Mar 14, 2011 (BUSINESS WIRE) -- Synchronoss Technologies, Inc. (NASDAQ: SNCR), the leading provider of activation and enablement of cloud services today announced that it has been selected by the CTIA Wireless Association to share its views on mobile connectivity and cloud computing at the CTIA Wireless 2011 tradeshow to be held in Orlando, Florida, March 22-24, 2011.

The panel titled, "Cloud Computing - Is There Rain in the Forecast?" will include Synchronoss' Mike Mulica, and senior executives from T-Mobile and Huawei. It will explore the trends in cloud computing and how the cloud could revolutionize mobile enterprise solutions and impact personal computing. The panel will take place on Wednesday, March 23rd at 3:30 PM at the Orange County Convention Center.

"With more consumers relying on smartphones and connected devices, there is a huge opportunity for cloud computing to further drive mobile proliferation," said Mike Mulica, President and Head of Strategy & Corporate Development, Synchronoss Technologies. "As more devices are utilized or when it is time to upgrade, there are tremendous opportunities for carriers, retailer/e-tailers and OEMs to deliver a unique and effortless content transfer and synchronization experience over the cloud."
